The Vice President Reports

Richard Nixon

Though ours was not a sight-seeing junket, we could not help being impressed by the magnificent scenery we were privileged to see. There are the incredibly beautiful flowers in Guatemala, the incomparable climate in San Juan, the densely cultivated coffee plantations in El Salvador, the vast expanses of the Caribbean area.

There, too, you find some of the most impressive religious, cultural, and historical monuments in the Western Hemisphere.

Though there may be times when the Vice President and I may not agree, we continue to work together.

I must say, though, that I was impressed by the hospitality shown us in the United States. In particular, the hospitality shown us by the President of Mexico, Mr. Lázaro Cárdenas, was truly exceptional.

The President was very gracious and hospitable to all of us.

I am confident that our trip will be remembered as a successful one.
